In Rule Makers, Rule Breakers celebrated cultural psychologist Michele Gelfand takes us on an epic journey through human cultures, offering a startling new view of the world and ourselves. With a mix of brilliantly conceived studies and surprising on-the-ground discoveries, she shows that much of the diversity in the way we think and act derives from a key difference—how tightly or loosely we adhere to social norms.

Why are clocks in Germany so accurate while those in Brazil are frequently wrong? Why do New Zealandâ€™s women have the highest number of sexual partners? Why are â€œRedâ€ and â€œBlueâ€ States really so divided? Why was the Daimler-Chrysler merger ill-fated from the start? Why is the driver of a Jaguar more likely to run a red light than the driver of a plumberâ€™s van? Why does one spouse prize running a â€œtight shipâ€ while the other refuses to â€œsweat the small stuff?â€

In search of a common answer, Gelfand has spent two decades conducting research in more than fifty countries. Across all age groups, family variations, social classes, businesses, states and nationalities, sheâ€™s identified a primal pattern that can trigger cooperation or conflict. Her fascinating conclusion: behavior is highly influenced by the perception of threat.

With an approach that is consistently riveting, Rule Makers, Rule Breakers thrusts many of the puzzling attitudes and actions we observe into sudden and surprising clarity.

Rule Makers and Rule Breakers: How Your Disposition ... But rule breakers run into their own problems, too, in large part because rule makers rule the world. And this is the way it has to be. A world full of rule breakers would be chaotic and anarchistic. We need to have a lot of rule makers to create and follow rules and maintain order and stability.
